WANT CREATIVITY? THEN INVEST IN CREATIVE ABRASION & COLLABORATION

What if the most commonly held beliefs about creativity are wrong?

What if creativity that drives innovation and growth doesn't reside in individuals, in lone geniuses, but in collaborative groups? Groups that aren't afraid to butt heads and lock horns as they bisect, dissect, and shred all ideas on the table in search of ones most likely to succeed.

This provocative, high energy, and refreshingly candid keynote is designed to help meet this need; encourage audiences to embrace creative abrasion and collaboration. Because, without diversity and conflict, without groups pushing and challenging each other, without groups collaborating with each other, genuine creativity and innovation are impossible and unsustainable.

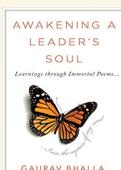

This refreshingly different keynote is ideal for:

- Current and Future Leaders
- All teams - leadership, departmental, cross-functional, multi-country, virtual
- HR, Talent Management, and Diversity professionals

Three key takeaways for Monday-morning action:

- Challenge and update individual and team perceptions and perspectives related to creativity, creative abrasion, and collaboration
- Core strategies for fostering creative abrasion and collaboration
- Role of visionary leadership in building courageous cultures that challenge assumptions and conventional wisdom

For deeper learning, the tactics and strategies for embracing and implementing creative abrasion and collaboration can also be delivered through training and coaching programs, and through facilitated workshops.
